

Planning Democracy: Modern India's Quest for Development

India is a country with a long and rich history of planning. The planning process in India began in the 1930s, when the Indian National Congress adopted a resolution calling for the establishment of a National Planning Committee. The Committee was tasked with developing a plan for India's economic development after independence. The first Five-Year Plan was launched in 1951, and since then, India has implemented a series of Five-Year Plans. These plans have played a major role in India's economic development, social transformation, and political evolution.
